THE LATE SECRETARY FRELINGHUYSEN.

FREDERICK THEODORE FRELINGHUYSEN, late Secretary of State for the United States of America, was born in Somerset county, New Jersey, in 1818. His grandfather graduated at Princeton College, in 1770, and served with distinction as Colonel at the battles of Trenton and Monmouth. He was a member of the Continental Congress of 1775, and was a United States Senator. Died in 1804. His father graduated at the same college the same year. In 1829 he was elected to the Senate of the United States, acted with the whig party, and took a prominent part in the debates. Was Chancellor of the University of New York in 1848, and in '44 was candidate for V. P. for the whig party, along with Henry Clay, for President. The subject of the present sketch was appointed by the Governor to the United States Senate in 1866, to fill the place of W. Wright deceased. He succeeded himself in 1871, and served continuously in that body until 1881, when he was commissioned Secretary of State. A gentleman of the old school, stately, bland, courteous but cool Mr. Frelinghuysen did not at all times captivate, as did his magnetic predecessor Blaine. Appointed by Mr. Arthur, and under a different policy, his position was not an easy one, still he filled it with credit. He was honest and painstaking in every public position which he occupied, and he conducted it in such wise as to inspire entire belief in his reliability and uprightness of purpose. He also conducted with success the negotiations of several very important treaties at the close of the late administration.

THE CELEBRATION.

The Anniversary of the Queen's Birth—A Big Time Anticipated.

If the fates on Monday are propitious, and we are blessed with the usual Queen's weather, the celebration will be a remarkable success. From Tacoma, Seattle and Port Townsend we have advices that large numbers of the citizens of those places are coming to Victoria to join with our people in celebrating the natal day of our beloved Queen. The committee are using every effort and are not sparing expense, to make the demonstration worthy of the occasion and of our beautiful city. In the forenoon, beginning at 9 o'clock, the international base ball match will take place at Beacon hill; and at ten o'clock the athletic competition, open to all amateurs, will begin at the same place. The following is the programme of sports: Long standing jump, 1st prize, $4; 2d prize, $2; 100 yard dash; 1st prize, $5; 2d prize, $2.50; running hop, step and jump, 1st prize, $4; 2d prize, $2; bicycle race, one mile, 1st prize, $5; 2d prize, $2.50; 100-yard foot race (for members of the club) medal, first prize, $7.50; vaulting with pole, 1st prize, $4; 2d prize, $2; quarter-mile race, 1st prize, $7.50; 2d prize, $3.50; exercises, horizontal bar, 1st prize, $5; 2d prize, $2.50; one-mile race, 1st prize, $20; 2d prize, $10; 3d prize, $5; sack race, 100 yards, 1st prize, $4; 2d prize, $2; hurdle race, 120 yards, 1st prize, $5; 2d prize, $2; consolation race, 150 yards, 1st prize, $7.50; 2d prize, $5; tug of war. It will be observed by the above that the prizes for the mile race have been increased to three, and the amounts raised to $20, $10 and $5. There are already six entries for this race, five for the quarter mile race and four for the hurdle race. There will be others before the competitions take place, so that a keen struggle is certain to be witnessed. The submarine explosion will occur at 11.30 a.m., off Beacon Hill, after which the crowd will adjournd to the Gorge, where the following aquatic programme will be carried out: Naval dingy race, $10; $5; canoe race—$2 per paddle, not to exceed twelve paddles; outrigged skiff—entrance, $1, $15; $7.50; single sculls—open to all comers—entrance, $5, $50; naval—for boats that may be obtainable, $30; double sculls (open) entrance $2.50, $30; northern canoes, $2 per paddle, not to exceed twelve; four-oared—rowing from gunwale (open) if 3 entries, entrance, $5, $50, $20; dingy race—short course—entrance, $1, $10, $5; tubs—tubs and paddles furnished by committee, $7, $3.50; event: walking greasy pole, $10.

The 25th will be a general holiday and all places of business will be closed. In addition to visitors from points on the Sound, very many pleasure-seekers will come to Victoria from the country adjacent and from the mainland. There should be a common effort to make all strangers so pleased with the visit that they will come back again on the first opportunity.

John Chinaman at Home.

The Rev. Dr. Houghton, a famous traveller of New York, recently delivered a lecture in the Metropolitan church, Toronto, on "John Chinaman, or a Glimpse of the Flowery Kingdom." The lecturer having travelled through the Flowery Kingdom was able to give his own observations of the manners and customs of the Chinese. While the Chinaman is neat in his dress the lecturer expressed his opinion that John is the filthiest man who lives, and the atmosphere is saturated with an indescribable smell of onions and opium. However, in their social, industrial, political, literary, and even their religious life, they were worthy of study as the most civilized pagan nation now in existence. They were apt to underrate the Chinese, but they were a quick, shrewd, and practical people. Deception was there elevated into a high art, and was regarded as an accomplishment rather than as a vice. A Chinaman never told the truth except when his interests imperatively demanded it, and then with a mental reservation. A man's word was never taken in business affairs in China. Thieving was reduced to a science. The domestic, social, and business life of the Chinese was described in a very entertaining manner.

ROAD TO DESTRUCTION.

Death on the Onderdonk Rail—How it Happens.

Laying up Wrath Against the Day of Judgment.

Our reporter met a gentleman at the Oriental on Friday from the mainland. The conversation turning upon the management of the railway under Mr. Onderdonk, the gentleman referred to, who is well informed on the subject, spoke to the following effect: "The place where the late accident occurred, is about three miles above Barnes, or Ashcroft, station. There is a small creek, such as can be jumped over. No attempt had been made to confine the water. A few dollars worth of lumber would have prevented the accident and saved the lives of the men. The trestles supporting the bridge were placed on the gravel, and when the stream was swollen by a rainstorm it washed out the gravel from under the trestles, leaving two of them hanging about five feet from the water.

THE STOKER IS DEAD;

the brakeman is nearly all found, having been picked up in pieces scattered around among the broken material. About the others injured I have no knowledge. As usual, this accident will be hushed up. No coroner's inquest will be held, and the daily or weekly slaughter will go on unheeded by the weak government or the well paid man whose duty it is to see there is no culpable negligence. How many lives have been sacrificed before and since the death of young Tupper at Harrison river, on whose body no inquest was held, and no censure passed on those who were responsible. At the seat of the rebellion lives are sacrificed necessarily to put down treason to the state, and thousands of dollars are spent for that purpose. Here we lose more than in such a rebellion, besides the mutilated who may be seen on the streets, and the crippled crowds that have left the country.

ORDER THERE IS NONE.

If a man gets through he may be considered lucky, and if he has goods and has not to pay as much for freight as the goods first cost, I consider he is in the nefarious ring. One man recently had a ticket for Savona's. The train did not stop there, but went on to a place they call Van Horne. Here there are no beds, and he took a boat and went about two miles to Savona's to wait for the stage. Every engine on the line has been rolled over the banks, and I hear the engine-driver has now had his fifth spill, and a conductor his third. Does the dirty puddle of politics control everything in the country? Are men afraid to open their mouths when they see things going wrong? Is the railway to be a finished job, or only for a contractor to take spoils to a foreign land. There is a good deal said about the Chinese who come here, but nothing is done about the white men hurled into eternity by the worst kind of culpability. One part of the press is gagged, and those who ought to take things up find personal interests are too strong."

The Greer Case.

This case, especially in regard to the number of times the accused will have appeared before the committee, commission, and magistrate, that thus far have had connection with it, and the judge before whom he may finally be tried, will rank among the celebrated trials of our courts. This afternoon, when called before Mr. Johnson, S. M., the witness for the defence had not arrived from New Westminster, the boat being late, and the prisoner was further remanded until 8 o'clock this evening. The magistrate intimated that he would not accept bail, unless an overwhelming mass of evidence was adduced for the defence, which may be accepted as an indication of what the decision of the court will be.

Qwong Lee & Co

In the case of Fan v. Fan, the application of the plaintiff for the appointment of a receiver was granted, Mr. Prevost, registrar of the Supreme Court, was appointed, and he took charge of the books and appointed Mr. Vrooman his agent. The defendant has been secreting his goods, and opium to the value of over $5000 was hidden away. The officers of the court succeeded in finding a considerable portion of it secreted in several out of the way places in the city. The end in this case is not yet. The lawyers have struck a bonanza.

Poundmaker Holds a Strong Position.

The Indian camp near Battleford possess over 1500 souls, 360 are mounted men and 700 in all capable of bearing arms. Bremner says their loss at Cut Knife was 50 killed and 17 wounded. Big Bear was not at the fight, his son participating. It is also claimed that only half the number of Indians were in the engagement with Col. Otter's force. This is improbable. Poundmaker now holds a strong position near Lizzard lake, fifty miles from here.

Unitarian Literature.

We are requested to announce that any person desiring Unitarian pamphlets, or papers, or information concerning Liberal Christianity, can be supplied gratuitously by addressing Miss F. LeBaron, 135 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill., or the Rev. G. H. Greer, Tacoma, W. T. Bound books will be loaned on receipt of postage.

Women Held as Hostages.

The prisoners sent in to Battleford with father Cochen include the twenty teamsters captured in Eagle hills, Fontaine, the captured scouts Bremner and Sayers, of Bresaylors settlement, and two women. It is made apparent that 21 women and children from Bresaylors settlement are held as hostages.

MOUNTAINS OF ICEBERGS.

The City of Berlin Strikes an Iceberg—Her Deck Staved in.

Special to THE TIMES.

NEW YORK, May 23.—The steamship City of Berlin, from Liverpool, arrived here this morning, bringing 141 cabin and 1110 steerage passengers. On the 19th inst. she struck an iceberg in a dense fog off the banks of Newfoundland. This caused a serious damage. Many tons of ice fell upon the forecastle deck, breaking it through and going down into the hold. Two men on the look out had a very narrow escape with their lives, the fog being so thick at times that they could not see the iceberg until it came tumbling down on the forward deck where they were standing. Orders were at once given to cut away the lashings of rafts and boats and to prepare them for lowering in case the ship should sink. Two of the boats swung out from the ship. Others were being put in readiness when it was discovered that the ship was not making water. Orders for lowering the boats were countermanded. The steamer came in collision with two other icebergs, but succeeded in weathering the repeated shocks and reaching this port in safety.

THE MANLY ART.

The Mitchell-Cleary Glove Contest Last Night in San Francisco.

Special to THE TIMES.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 23.—Much dissatisfaction is expressed in sporting circles over the decision of the referee in respect to the Mitchell-Cleary glove contest of last night. The English champion's admirers claim that he had the best of it through the entire four rounds, and that had the fight lasted another minute Cleary would have been knocked out. Cleary's friends, on the other hand, say the American champion proved himself the better man of the two, as he knocked Mitchell clear off his feet in the third round. To this Mitchell's friends reply that the Englishman slipped and that if it had not been for this he would not have gone down at all. The referee, however, sticks to it, that in deciding it a draw he did fairly to both men. The contest was only for four rounds. Neither of the men were badly punished. The dispute will probably result in another match to a finish. It is stated this afternoon that the receipts of the house were $7000, which, after deducting expenses, will be divided between the two pugilists.

THE CINCINNATI HOLOCAUST.

Funeral of the Victims To-day—Most Impressive Scenes.

Special to THE TIMES.

CINCINNATI, May 23.—The funeral of six of the victims of Thursday's fire at Sullivan's printing works took place to-day. At St. Xavier's Catholic church, four of them, three Lavan sisters and Miss Winn, had mass celebrated. All the coffins were in church at one time. They were almost buried with flowers. The body of the house was crowded, very largely with working girls. The scene was most impressive. Other victims are being buried from different places.

WHITE FLAG OF TRUCE.

Riel's Capture Creates Consternation in the Indian Camp.

ST. PAUL, May 23.—A Battleford dispatch of the 21st says: At sunset to-night Father Cochen and twenty-five other persons, bearing white flags, arrived from Poundmaker's camp with a letter asking upon what terms surrender would be accepted. He wants a reply in two days. He also sent messengers with similar letters to Gen. Middleton. This action was caused by the arrival of four half-breeds who reported the capture of Riel. The news created consternation in the Indian camp. The braves are hiding their rifles and removing their war paint. A council was held, the result of which was a decision to send in the priest and the prisoners. It is said that Poundmaker was on his way to join Riel when met by a half-breed scout. The letter was written at Poundmaker's dictation by Jefferson, schoolmaster on the reserve.

Rumors of Cholera Denied.

Special to THE TIMES.

LONDON, May 22.—Sir Charles Dilke, president of the local government board, stated that the rumors circulated on the continent that an outbreak of cholera occurred in Great Britain was totally unfounded.

No cholera is known to exist in north of England.

Gladstone Unable to Speak Definitely.

Special dispatch to THE TIMES.

LONDON, May 22.—In the House of Commons this afternoon Mr. Gladstone said the government would not be able to speak definitely concerning the duties on wine spirits and beer while the negotiations with Russia still continue. The government, he said, would give due notice of their intentions regarding these duties.

Hudson Bay Post Pillaged.

ST. PAUL, May 20.—A special dispatch to the Pioneer Press, from Winnipeg, says: Dispatches to the Hudson Bay company to-day announce that several of their most important posts north of the Saskatchewan have been destroyed and plundered by Indians. All the goods were carried away or burned, and the officers and people were turned adrift to starve. The post at Green lake, 200 miles north of Edmonton, toward Athabasca, was also treated in the manner described. The loss to the company will be great, as their goods were worth hundreds of thousands of dollars.

THE DARK CONTINENT.

The Congo Claimed by a New Chief, the Sultan of Zanzibar.

Special to THE TIMES.

PARIS, May 22.—The French society of geography has received news from the upper Congo that the large Mohammedan population inhabiting that region, excited probably by the stories of El Mahdi's success, have resolved to assert their claims to the centre of Africa. A powerful chief, named Tipu Taid, learned to be the owner of the existence ivory fields, intends raising a powerful army and proceeded into the interior. Tipu Taid's army is exceedingly strong and numbers thousands. His soldiers are armed with rifles. This army is reported now advancing, making its way by pillage and massacre. Arawona station has been sacked and destroyed. The negroes who inhabited the place fled in panic before the attack. Tipu Taid has proclaimed Congo as a territory belonging to the Sultan of Zanzibar and he has announced his intention to suppress all opposition to this claim.

A FENIAN SCARE.

Very Like a Whale.—A Most Unlikely Story.

QUEBEC, May 21.—Lester Fadden, a farmer in Sutton P. Q., was awakened one night by a noise in his barn. Hastening thither he surprised a number of men who had effected an entrance, apparently to steal his horses, and who fled at his approach, leaving in their haste several papers, showing complete plans of Canadian barracks, the force and disposition of British troops, maps of adjoining states, locations of places where horses, arms and provisions could be obtained, together with other matter which might be useful to an invading force. Mr. Fadden at once transmitted these documents to the Canadian authorities. This has led to a Fenian scare.

Special to THE TIMES.

NEW YORK, May 23.—The weekly bank statement shows the reserve increase to be $2,396,000. The banks now hold $59,812,000 in excess of legal requirements.

Gen. Grant not at all Comfortable.

Special to THE TIMES.

NEW YORK, May 23.—"It would be difficult to tell just how many hours father slept last night," said Col. Grant this morning, "because his sleep was so much broken. It was not a good night at all. His wakefulness was owing to pain occasioned, I think, by a change in the weather. He is feeling pain this morning, and is by no means as comfortable as he was yesterday morning."

Victor Hugo's Will.

Special to THE TIMES.

PARIS, May 23.—Mr. Allain Targe, minister of the Interior, has authorized the friends of Victor Hugo to allow his remains to lie in state for three days under Arche de Triomphe. The body will be conveyed thither to-morrow and placed in the catafalque. Victor Hugo bequeathed $10,000 to the poor. He left a request that his body should be conveyed to the grave in a pauper hearse, without any religious rites. In the document containing this Hugo affims his belief in God. A fund for a national monument for the dead poet has already been opened.

Emperor of Germany not Dead.

BERLIN, May 23.—There is no foundation whatever for the rumor circulated in Paris to-day that the Emperor of Germany was dead. His majesty is progressing favorably towards recovery from his cold, and it is expected in a few days his health will be completely restored.

Salvador and Guatemala.

Special to THE TIMES.

LIBERTAD, via Galveston, May 23.—Mediation of Honduras which had for its object the settlement of the difficulties existing between Salvador and Guatemala has failed. The revolutionary forces led by Mendeniz, who had been clandestinely armed, and assisted by Guatemala, has been driven back by the Salvador troops to the town of Santa Ana. Four hundred Guatemalian troops crossed the frontier of Salvador this morning. This invasion complicates matters and will probably result in re-opening of the whole Central American question. It is expected that the original alliance against Guatemala will be renewed.

Indian Loss at Batouche.

Rev. Father Moulin, the parish priest at Batouche, was recently asked as to the losses of the rebels in the fight at Batouche. He gave them as 51 killed and 173 wounded. His statement may be relied upon as accurate. He also reports large numbers surrendering themselves to Middleton. All say they were forced into the rebellion. Charles Nolin is blamed by all as the instigator of the half-breeds and Monkane as the instigator among the Indians. Forty bodies of rebels have been found on the field, fifteen those of Indians.

Destitute Families.

Senator Alexander has given notice in the senate that he will call attention to the destitute condition of the wives and families of the volunteers who have been killed or wounded while engaged in suppressing the insurrection in the Northwest, and will ask the government whether it is their intention to grant immediate aid to those cases where such families are destitute.

A Wealthy Rebel.

Gabriel Dumont, Riel's General, who planned the rebel defenses, is reported to have been worth about $80,000. By a blunder of the government a patent was issued to a colonization company, granting it the land owned and occupied by Dumont. His house, farm, buildings, cleared lands, orchard, etc., were all disposed of in the patent without his knowledge. He was naturally wroth. It is thought he will escape.

Weirs in the Cowichan.

Officer Mowat of the Fishery Department, went up yesterday to examine the Cowichan river. It is reported that the Indians there have thrown a weir across the steam which prevents the free passage of fish. The aborigines claim this privilege on certain streams. An effort will be made to effect an amicable arrangement satisfactory to all parties.

From Barkerville.

We are again pleased to see our old friend Mr. Joseph Mason (of Mason & Daley), Barkerville, Cariboo. He has taken up quarters at the Oriental.

Address, THE TIMES P. & P. CO., Victoria B. C.

J. C. McLAGAN, Manager.

PETITIONS against the adoption of the Franchise Bill are daily pouring in to the members of parliament on both sides to be presented to the House.

PETER MITCHELL, discussing the deadlock in parliament, says the time had come when some ministerialists should approach the opposition leaders and come to a compromise understanding.

THERE were shipped from the Agricultural College at Guleph, Ont., recently, three steers, each weighing respectively 2800, 2740 and 2560 lbs. to Liverpool. These are the largest ever purchased for export trade in Canada.

THE Montreal Gazette gives currency to the stories afloat that SIR CHARLES TUPPER will shortly return from England and re-enter the Government. It is also set afloat that SIR A. T. GALT may succeed SIR LEONARD TILLEY if the health of the latter necessitates his retirement.

THE Maharajah Dhuleep Singh has resolved to leave England, and he is, therefore, proposing to sell his famous sporting estate of Elveden, in Norfolk. The property extends to some 17,000 acres, of which two-thirds are occupied by the owner's game farm. The shooting on this estate has always been very good. In one season 3600 pheasants were shot, also 9400 partridges, 2000 hares and 70,000 rabbits.

THE report of the superintendent of insurance for Canada, just published, shows that last year new policies to the amount of $38,694,341 were issued, and premiums to the amount of $4,131,202 collected, while the claims made were only $1,518,366. The number of companies furnishing returns is thirty-eight, of which nine are Canadian, eighteen British and eleven American; but seven of the British and four of the American Companies have ceased doing new business in the Dominion. Since 1878, the business of the Canadian Companies has more than doubled, expanding, from $28,656,556 to $66,544,708 at the close of 1884, while in the same period the business of British Companies has increased only from $30,075,533 to $34,553,787, and that of the American Companies from $36,016,848 to $44,616,596.

THE TIMES' cable dispatches a few days ago intimated that MR. PHELPS the new U. S. Minister to the Court at St. James' had been introduced to Her Majesty by his predecessor, MR. LOWELL, who proved himself to be a very popular representative of the American people. MR. PHELPS is not like MR. LOWELL, a man distinguished in the world of letters; but he is highly cultivated and esteemed by men of intellect, as well as popular in society, while his knowledge of jurisprudence and his legal habits of mind will be most useful in case any questions of international law should arise between the two governments. His appointment was cordially approved by the best judges in the United States, and was especially welcomed by those who desire that friendly relations should be maintained between the Republic and Great Britain.

THE TIMES is astonished that the Tacoma Ledger, a paper of reputed respectable standing should so far forget itself as to indite and publish the following contemptable insinuations respecting the propriety of our beloved and widowed Queen. The high esteem in which our sovereign is held as a ruler, mother and woman, by the right thinking people of all civilized nations is, in itself, the best answer to such uncalled for remarks. THE TIMES is inclined to believe that the production was the effort of the printers' devil, wishing to be facetious, rather than the sentiments of the editor, which creep in unseen, as have before now irregularities, into even the London Times:

To say the least, it does not look due at for Queen Victoria to invite Lowell to her big house at Windsor to wine and dine and pass the night there, and she a lone widow and John Brown not three years dead. Lowell is a minister, it is true, and would scarcely transgress the proprieties, but a little more is strange, and it put on.

THE MASS MEETING.

The mass meeting on Thursday night was a significant gathering, in other respects then in point of numbers. It is a fact, we believe, that never before in this province have so many earnest and determined men assembled for the accomplishment of a common purpose. Their sincerity was real and apparent. There was no hoodlum or rough element present—in point of fact there is no such element in Victoria Of the thousands who stood under the electric light, approving listeners of the pointed and spirited speeches, the large majority were mechanics and laboring men, the bone and sinew of our population. The crowd was a highly respectable and intelligent one There were no ward politicians present; and their absence did not in the least militate against the success of the demonstration. The movement has gone farther than the majority of the professional politicians are prepared to follow. Those interested individuals lost their grip on the people at the City Hall meeting, when, in spite of their weak protests, a resolution fastening the blame of future bloodshed, on the heads of our governmental and judicial rulers, was carried amidst wild applause. Since that time they seem to have forsaken a cause to the advocacy of which they brought but a doubtful sincerity. It is well for the movement that this has happened. The shibboleth of the white working man of Victoria should be, as the chairman, Mr. Robertson, proclaimed it to be "we know no party."

The speeches were earnest, eloquent and powerful efforts. Plain truths were plainly told. The "appeal" to workingmen of the Dominion has two sides to it. The one is a terrible indictment against those in high places; the other an humble request to the men of the east to join hands with their struggling brothers in the west, to stem the flood that is devastating our Province. It will not be heard in vain. The power that is behind the throne is in accord with the people of Victoria on the question, and has only to be imbued with a proper conception of the enormity of the evil, to assist, as one man, the white workingmen of Victoria, in securing their rights, and in perpetuating the institutions that they have founded and which they alone maintain.

CANADA'S SALMON SUPPLY.

Mr. WHITCHER, lately of the Marine and Fisheries department, has repeatedly pointed out the danger of our streams becoming exhausted of the supply of salmon. A very interesting work has recently been published by a Mr. S. Z. Joncas entitled the "Fisheries of Canada. Like MR. WHITCHER he announces that our rivers which were formerly renowned for the large quantity of salmon found in them are not so well stocked with this fish, owing to the indiscriminate fishing at all seasons of the year and to the want of proper laws for its preservation.

MR. JONCAS shows his appreciation of the situation when he unhesitatingly announces that, despite the endeavors to replenish our rivers, and though we are spending thousands of dollars every year to help the natural propagation by artificial breeding; in presence of the fact that from twelve to thirteen fish-breeding establishments under the control of the government—millions of young fish are yearly distributed in many of our rivers—yet there is no marked increase in the annual catch, but rather a tendency to a gradual decrease. "My own opinion," he adds, "is that more protection should be given. More and better paid guardians should be appointed, and we should try to stop the destructive work of the numerous marauders who every fall enter our best rivers and kill thousands of salmon on their spawning beds." And this is the remedy which he proposes:—"My own opinion is that the present fly-fishing season is too long. I firmly believe that if the angler was obliged to put up his lines on the same day that the salmon fisherman is forced by law to raise his nets and leave a free passage to this fish, great benefits would be derived from such regulations."

The pamphleteer, while giving publicity to these facts, disclaims all desire to convey the impression that that the salmon fishery is exhausted, nevertheless he is forced to admit that our salmon have somewhat decreased in abundance compared with what they were twenty or thirty years ago. They have, however, he says, considerable importance as to a source of wealth to many of the inhabitants of the Dominion besides affording splendid sport to a number of gentlemen from Europe and America, who visit our rivers every summer to enjoy the pleasure of salmon fishing. Our buffalo, we may say, formerly used to afford similar pleasure, but where are they now, and where will our salmon be unless afforded greater protection? MR. JONCAS describes the colossal proportions to which the salmon fishery of British Columbia has attained, twelve million pounds having been the catch in 1882, and even then the canneries were not worked up to their full capacity He goes on to say: "Let us hope that the British Columbia fishermen will be wise enough to economize by a judicious fishing the source of wealth they have in their salmon rather than be obliged, later on, to try to restore it from exhaustion." Forewarned is, according to the old saying, equivalent to being forearmed. It is time to call a halt which, in their own interests, those who fish for sport and those who fish for gain should not hesitate to comply with, or where, like many other things whose value we only appreciate when they are gone, will our salmon be Pace.

SIR LEONARD TILLEY.

The announcement of SIR LEONARD TILLEY's sudden departure for England proved a genuine surprise to the people of Canada, for it was but a few days previous that rumors were in circulation as to the condition of his health, which was such as to cause his friends alarm. He took his seat in the Commons for the first time since his recovery, the evening previous to his departure. It was plain to be seen by SIR LEONARD's countenance that he had not reached that degree of convalescence his many friends would desire to see, nor did he appear to be sufficiently well to undertake such a long and dangerous voyage as that which he has been compelled to take. An awkward financial embarrassment under which the government is now laboring, has forced SIR LEONARD to go to England to raise $60,000,000 which is required for immediate government, and C. P. R. syndicate and other uses. The floating debt of the Dominion government is understood to amount to $18,000,000; while the amount required for capital expenditure this year, with the cost of the Northwest expedition, will reach $8,000,000, half of which will be required for the subsidy payments and the balance of the loan to the C. P. R. Of the loan of 1860, which matures July 1st, $5,000,000 has been extinguished through the sinking fund, and $25,000,000 remain, of which it is believed that $20,000,000 will be retired by an exchange into a short date 4 per cent bond at par. The new loan will, therefore, be in the neighborhood of $30,000,000. If the Finance Minister succeeds in retiring the loan as proposed a saving of $250,000 a year in interest will be effected. Owing to the Minister's illness it was thought by the cabinet that MR. COURTNEY would be equal to the emergency and negotiate the loan. When that gentleman arrived in New York, and cabled the government agent in London, an answer, it is said, was received to the effect that SIR LEONARD's presence in the English market would be imperative. No doubt the agent informed the Ministry that owing to the Northwest rebellion a feeling of uneasiness in regard to Canadian securities now prevails on the stock market. SIR LEONARD is accompanied by LADY TILLEY. Ardent hopes are entertained by the community at large that the voyage will restore to the honorable Finance Minister his wonted health and vigor. LADY TILLEY only goes so far as New York.

A Pretty Woman's Secret.

Fear of discovery, when she resorts to false hair and dyes, is a source of constant anxiety to her. The very persons from whom she most desires to hide the waning of her charms are the ones most likely to make the discovery. But there is no reason why she should not regain and retain all the beauty of hair that was her pride in youth. Let her use AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and, not only will her hair cease to fall out, but a new growth will appear where the scalp has been denuded; and locks that are turning gray, or have actually grown white, will return to their pristine freshness and brilliance of color. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR cures

Hereditary Baldness.

GEORGE MAYER, Flatonia, Texas, was bald at 23 years of age, as his ancestors had been for several generations. One bottle of HAIR VIGOR started a growth of soft, downy hair all over his scalp, which soon became thick, long, and vigorous.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Is not a dye, but, by healthful stimulation of the roots and color glands, speedily restores to its original color hair that is

Turning Gray.

MRS. CATHERINE DEAMER, Point of Rocks, Md., had her hair suddenly blanched by fright, during the late civil war. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR restored it to its natural color, and made it softer, glossier, and more abundant than it had been before.

Scalp Diseases

Which cause dryness, brittleness, and falling of the hair, dandruff, itching, and annoying sores, are all quickly cured by AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It cured HERBERT BOYD, Minneapolis, Minn., of intolerable Itching of the Scalp; J. N. CARTER, JR., Occoquan, Va., of Scald Head; MRS. D. V. S. LOVELACE, Louisiaville, Ky., of Tetter Sores; MISS BESSIE H. BEDLOR, Burlington, Vt., of Scalp Disease and Dandruff. Torpidity of the roots of the hair, which, if neglected, may result in incurable baldness, is readily cured by AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. As

WAS HOBBS RIGHT?

[W. G. David in The Current.]

It was odd, the way I first met Hobbs. I had been in Florence a year, ostensibly finishing my education, a phrase always vague enough when applied to young men who perform that important operation abroad, but especially vague in my case. Insensible absorption doubtless did something for me, but as I looked back over the year I could see no very definite acquisitions and was not at all pleased with the retrospect. My well-planned assault on the Italian language had speedily dwindled into a desultory skirmish on the borderlands that gave me nothing but subsistence; for I had barely learned enough to order a dinner, while as for art—well, I began at the wrong end of that, and had been ever since in inextricable confusion. To be sure, I could talk learnedly enough about it—with those who knew less of it than I did—but I did not, and could not, understand it. I could not bring my mind to books, a not unnatural reaction, as they had been somewhat forcibly brought to it during my college days. My friends were uninteresting, and music had few charms for me, so I found myself spending many hours in my rooms, asking myself a great many times what I was good for, without ever getting anything like a satisfactory answer, and had about made up my mind to go home and do something when I met Hobbs.

I was sitting one morning over my breakfast in the cafe where I took that meal, feeling more than usually dissatisfied with the world in general and myself in particular, and gazing idly out of the open window at the passers-by, when my attention was attracted to a little child that had strayed out into the middle of the street and was in imminent danger of being run over by a rapidly approaching carriage, the driver of which was engaged in conversation with its occupants. I started to my feet with an involuntary cry, and as I did so saw a young man dart from the opposite sidewalk, snatch the child from under the horse's feet and deposit it at the cafe door, where it was claimed by an agitated young woman, who began a voluble thank-offering. The young man smiled, nodded, and, entering the cafe, took a seat at the table next mine. I have always found a peculiar pleasure in trying to assign nationality, character, and occupation to people thus thrown in my way, and turned eagerly from a contemplation of the street to a scrutiny of new-comer. The subject of my speculations this time was in no way remarkable. It was a young man of medium height and slender figure, with dark, almost sallow complexion and tolerably regular features. Nothing in his dress served to distinguish him from the other occupants of the cafe, unless it was a certain negligence that is seldom found in the young men of Florence. His clothes fitted him well, yet he seemed not to know it, for he sprawled out in his chair as if clothes were furthest from his thoughts; his vest was half unbuttoned, his coat dusty. Altogether he was totally uninteresting, and I would probably never have noticed him had it not been for the incident in the street. I was deliberating whether to class him as Austrian or Greek, for I felt sure he was no Italian, when he looked up, caught my eye, smiled slightly, and said "Good morning." Then I saw that his eyes were blue, and under the influence of that smile—the pleasantest, frankest smile I have ever seen—I responded, "Good morning," and wondered where I had met him. Trying to decide this question I turned again to the window, and only observed from the corners of my eyes that he drank his coffee as if he thoroughly enjoyed it, and when he had finished it took a cigarette from his pocket, lighted it, and settled back in his chair as if he meant to enjoy that also. After smoking a few moments he got up, and, coming to my table, stood looking out of the window for a long time in silence. At length he turned to me and said, "Bored?"

"What does the fellow mean?" I thought, and was about to reply curtly, when, looking up, I saw he was smiling at me.

"Bored? Why, no. Why do you ask?" I asked feebly.

"Because you look so," he answered promptly.

"Well," I said, "I don't know but that I am a little at a loss for something to do this morning."

He looked at me for a moment in silence, with a half-wondering, half-quizzical look in his eyes, and then said:

"I am likely to have excitement enough before noon."

"How's that?" I asked.

"Well, my landlord has intimated somewhat pointedly that if my rent is not paid this morning my room must be vacated at once. I am a painter, and he thinks a poor one, for he will not see enough evidence of genius in me to make him willing to trust me any longer. He is absurdly ludicrous when angry, and if you think it will furnish you an amusement, why come along and see it. I shall enjoy it immensely."

Nothing loath for this trivial even diversion, and feeling an unaccountable interest in this strange fellow, I got up and followed him into the street. He thrust his hand into the pockets of his coat, and, turning down a side street, led the way toward a part of the city more old for its aristocracy four centuries ago than to-day.

"You see," he said, I have a number of pictures for sale in the shops, and thought that some of them might have been sold, but I have been looking around, and they have not been going off very fast," and added after a short pause, "I don like my rooms any way; they're too small, and the light's not good."

Arrived at last to our destination, we ascended flight after flight of steps until we reach the rooms, a studio and bedroom, in the top story.

A half dozen unfinished pictures stood on easels and against the walls in the studio. The scant furniture was of the most heterogeneous description. A rickety, plebeian looking chair stood before a delicately carved writing desk that might once have graced a palace of the Medici. On the floor was a Turkish rug, much worn and literally bestrewed with bits of rag and cigarette stumps. On the mantel stood an iron figure of the crucifixion, flanked by cigars, a blacking brush, books, letters. I had barely noted these things when the landlord, a short, fat, ball of a man entered; grew very much excited when informed there was no money for him, insisting himself, until he looked like a toy balloon, at the beginning of each of his shrill sentences, and then gradually blowing off, until at the end he seemed about half his original size, only to repeat the inflation and collapse with as great rapidity as was consistent with the enormous quantity of it that must have been required. My new friend took it all very coolly, being evidently by that time well accustomed to it, paid little attention to the angry (who grew visibly weaker), but filled a large meerschaum, lighted it, dragged a large [illegible] things into it, [illegible] by this time com[illegible] against the [illegible] little red eyes the only signs of the fires within. I inquired of my new-acquaintance if he had engaged rooms elsewhere, and being answered in the negative, asked where he was going. "That's more than I know," he said; whereupon I remarked that I had more rooms than I needed, and would be pleased if he would occupy one of mine until he succeeded in finding some to suit him.

"All right; much obliged," he said, and went on packing, as he called it.

And thus it happened that night found Hobbs sitting luxuriously in my easy chair, and looking as happy and contented as if I were his best beloved brother. He made several ineffectual attempts to get rooms during the following week, being considerably hampered by his inability to comply with certain conditions as to prepayment.

By the time he had been with me a week I had decided to remain in Florence six months longer. One of the windows of my sitting-room furnished just the light he needed for his work, so in it he placed his easel. My evenings, dull and profitless, were now spent in pleasant converse with Hobbs, whom I found a most delightful companion. He had traveled much, and seemed to know a little of every possible subject, though when he had traveled or how he had learned so much, for he was barely five and twenty, and rarely read anything, were equally inexplicable to me. I became much attached to him; indeed, his genial insouciance, his utter unselfishness, and his bright, ever-ready wit were all conquering, and yet as I learned to know him better I saw that he had many faults. Foremost of these was his utter thriftlessness. He would past whole weeks of almost complete impecuniosity, as gay as a lark, living in a hap hazard Bohemian way, refusing any assistance, finishing his dinner of a crust and a glass of water with a merry dissertation upon the folly of high-living, and then, a picture being sold, would insist upon a supper at the most expensive restaurant in the city, and on such occasions no game was too rare, no wines too costly, and no cigars too good for us. I always protested against such extravagance, but argument and supplication were alike in vain, for he brushed them both aside with a wave of his hand, and would take no refusal. And what a treat were those suppers to me! Hobbs, always entertaining, became fairly magical under the triple influence of meat, wine, and a filled purse.

Another trait that displeased me in Hobbs was his inconsistency. He was very clear and positive in his opinions, an ardent advocate of the truths of Christianity, and of strict views of morality, yet he never went to church, although always intending to, occasionally drank more wine than was good for him, and, I regret to add, swore with great vigor and fluency when his pictures were rejected. He was very irregular in his work, and would pass weeks without touching brush to canvas, and then for a week paint almost incessantly. He always seemed perfectly satisfied with his finished productions and never saw the least justice in any criticisms that any one ventured to make, and yet he was a shrewd critic of others' work. He was always lamenting that he was not famous. A famous painter, he said, could paint as he chose. I suggested that famous painters chose to paint well, and that fame was only to be attained by following the methods of great masters. He would vehemently declare that the great masters might be hanged, that no man was worthy the name of artist unless he had something to say, and was brave enough to say it in his own way. I found it a pleasant pastime to sit and watch Hobbs at his work. He was never so absorbed but that he could listen and talk, and it was on these occasions that I began to derive my first correct ideas on art, for whatever Hobbs was in practice, in all theory he was well nigh perfect. I can see him now, pausing to turn and brandish his brush at me as he lays down his ideas.

One day, upon returning from my morning walk I found Hobbs engaged in painting the portrait of a young woman, while an older one sat in a window working upon some embroidery. I recognized the latter as a Mrs. Anstein, the wife of an old American resident, and the former was introduced as her niece, Miss Vernon, just out from America. Miss Vernon was very beautiful, with delicate complexion, fair hair, and dark blue eyes. It was evident that Hobbs and she had already become good friends, and I was not long in coming to the conclusion that, rapidly as he worked, her image was being transferred to something other than his canvas with still greater rapidity. She sat apparently all unconscious that there was any other than a purely business aspect to the sitting. Hobbs talked a great deal, and made himself very entertaining, and I thought the more so that Miss Vernon seemed an excellent listener. She seemed without the least pretense; frankly confessed her ignorance of subjects with which many young women would have feigned acquaintance, and received the delicate compliments which Hobbs ventured as he put in an eye or a lock of hair as if she had no doubt of his sincerity, but was a little afraid his judgment was not good.

Before the portrait was finished Hobbs had become a frequent caller at Mrs. Anstein's, and not long after he told me one day of his engagement to Miss Vernon. As I had foreseen the likelihood of the result I was not surprised, and congratulated him warmly, as I thought it the best thing that could happen to him. He said it was Miss Vernon's wish that the engagement should not be made public for a time.

"How do you propose to support a wife when you find it so difficult to support yourself?" I asked.

"Oh! that'll be all right," said he.

"I suppose you know she is poor?" I observed.

"Yes," said Hobbs. "What of that? So am I;" and, and throwing his leg over the arm of his chair, he surveyed the room as if to see how it would do for Mrs. Hobbs.

After this he worked steadily and with good success, and might have laid by some money had he been endowed with the least prudence, but he saved nothing. I did not despair, for I knew that Miss Vernon had never been rich, and I heard her described as a young woman of good sense, so I thought she might easily approve herself financier.

One evening, about a month after his engagement, Hobbs came in earlier than usual, and I saw at once that something had happened to disturb him. He was pale and haggard, and his eye avoided mine. He dropped into a chair and sat plunged in deep thought. I thought him ill and asked what was the matter. "Nothing," he said. When I went to leave I left him sitting there, with his legs stretched out before him and his head on his breast, and when I came there the next morning he was there still, sitting as if he had not moved. He arose, with a "Good morning," and going to the hotel, filled and lighted his pipe.

After pacing to and fro a few moments in silence, he took the pipe from his lips and still walking, began:

"I have a story to tell you. It is about myself, and will explain my conduct last night. You have also my conduct last some about my peculiarities. It is doubtless wonderful uncertain. I was a city of one of the southern states. It has been was a portrait painter. My father grandfather had been his father and I was a years old more than. When the care of his and myself he man some years you friend, a self, who had been than him tracted to him by his love for art. To this man I owe everything I have and am. All that is good in me comes from his bounty and example. When I was 21 I told him that I was resolved to rely no more on him, and that I meant to try and justify by my life his great goodness to me. I meant it, and have honestly tried to keep my word. He told me earnestly that he had no fears for my future if I would only do my duty as I saw it. I have always seen my duty clearly and rightly enough, but I don't remember ever having done it thoroughly.

"Last night Miss Vernon told me that the time had come for making our engagement known. Her parents, she said, had always intended to marry her to an old family friend, a man much older than herself, who had loved her from a child, who was in every way worthy of her respect, and whom she would probably have married had she not met me. She said that he is now about starting for Florence, and that she thought her parents ought to be informed of our engagement before he arrives. Then taking a photograph album from the table she opened it and said, 'This is he; do you not think him handsome?' The face was that of the man whose kindness to me I have told you of. I was too much overcome to say anything, and came away at once, pleading a sudden indisposition. I spent last night in trying to find out my duty in this matter. I have found it. I see it clearly. I shall see Miss Vernon for the last time to-night, and leave Florence to-morrow."

All the arguments that my ingenuity could suggest were vain.

That night when Hobbs called at Mrs. Anstein's he found Miss Vernon alone. What happened, what he said, or how he explained his conduct, are things I do not know. I only know that he left Florence for London the next morning, and that Miss Vernon was ill for several weeks.

Fifteen years had passed before I saw Hobbs again last summer. He lives in a pleasant villa in a London suburb, with a white haired lady, who is wholly devoted to her son. Hobbs is famous now, and paints as he pleases.

He has not changed much; his dark hair is well streaked with gray, and he has wrinkles about his eyes and forehead that forty years ought not to have put there, but the pleasant ways and happy smiles are still his, only tempered and softened.

One night we had sat long in his library talking of our Florentine days. The fire was burning low. We were both talked out. After a long silence, broken only by the monotonous ticking of the clock, Hobbs said: "Those days were the pleasantest of my life. For a few weeks I was really happy. I have thought much of the circumstances under which I left Florence. I have, I think, thought of every possible aspect of the subject, and think now as I thought then, that I was simply doing my duty. And yet, had I it all to do over again I would let duty go. The consciousness of having done my duty has not brought me one moment's happiness. Perhaps our standard is wrong, or their's something higher than duty."

I said nothing. What could I say? I was uncertain whether he knew what I did—that his friend had been long delayed in getting to Florence and that Miss Vernon had rejected him and married an Italian gentleman.

Adulteration of Honey.

[Philadelphia Times.]

The adulteration of food has been practiced to such an extent that purchasers no longer expect to get a pure article, even when paying the highest prices. It is generally believed that two-thirds of the milk sold in all our great cities is deprived of half its cream; it is known that butter is made from beef fat and cotton-seed oil; maple syrups have lately been made from most anything of a sweet nature, and now it is stated that most of the honey we eat is manufactured, and that much of it has not even a drop of genuine honey about it. This alleged honey was first sold in this city some five or six years ago. Its sale at first was scant, but for the past two years it has become very popular, and it is claimed that there is now but little else to be found in the market. Some of it is sold as manufactured honey, though a great deal of it is dealt out to unsuspecting purchasers as the natural product of the honey bee.

The spurious kind is usually put up in little square boxes which sell for from 25 to 30 cents a pound. It looks like honey, and it is said that it takes an excellent judge to tell that it is a fraud on the bee. The comb is manufactured with such skill that few can tell it from the genuine article. It is made from paraffine or beeswax, and the honey is blown into it by machinery. Another kind is put up in glass vessels like ordinary jelly packages, the centre of which contains a piece of honeycomb, and the honey is made by pouring about six parts of glucose around one part of honey in the comb. Some of it is adulterated with glucose, some with cane sugar, and others by heating ordinary sugar with an acid; but it all resembles honey, and to a certain extent has its flavor and odor.

[New York Graphic.]

Roller skates were invented by that very ingenious man, Gabriel Ravel, of the Ravel Pantomimists, and "The Skaters of Wilna," performed at Niblo's Garden over forty years ago. A smart Yankee by the name of Plympton caught on the idea, and somehow not many years ago got out patents here and in England for them and realized a fortune. As far as I can see and remember there is not the slightest alteration from Gabriel's original skate.

Crude petroleum is now used in the Brooklyn fire department engines, and the cost is said to be less than one-fifth that of coal. There are also no sparks.

The yearly consumption of meats in the United States per capita is 120 pounds; in England, 104 pounds; France, 74 pounds; Germany 69 pounds.

"Blowing Out the Gas" Explained.

[Rossiter W. Raymond, Expert.]

There is undoubtedly a vast deal of gratuitous insult and contumely heaped upon the head of "that fool who blew his gas out." I cannot believe that there are enough people of this exaggerated type of idiocy in the country to fill out the list of deaths from asphyxiation by illuminating gas. I am of the opinion that in the majority of these causes the fault lies in having the gas turned down when retiring for the night, either from an idea of economy in the saving of matches or some other reason, and that the flame is afterward extinguished by any one of a number of natural causes, with resulting insensibility and possible death of the victim from inhaling the escaping gas.

The following is a case in point: While staying at a hotel in Pittsburg recently I discovered by narrow escape from suffocation on my own part, that the gas had a peculiar way of extinguishing itself. After studying over the matter I came to the conclusion that the patent machine in which it was produced permitted air to enter so that at times there would not be sufficient gas emitted at the burner to sustain combustion.

One night the entire house was aroused by the porter going through the corridors and pounding on each door and asking the rudely awakened guest if his gas was escaping, the halls being filled with it from some unknown source. In the morning the answer to the universal question was: "O, that fool in No. 42 blew my gas out." "Excuse me, gentlemen," said the man in question, "I was tired and sleepy. That gas blew itself out, and the foolishness of No. 42 consisted in only expecting it to burn."

Narrow Escape.

ROCHESTER, June 1, 1882. "Ten Years ago I was attacked with the most Intense and deathly pains in my back and —Kidneys,

"Extending to the end of my toes and to my brain!

"Which made me delirious!

"From agony! ! ! !

"It took three men to hold me on my bed at times!

"The Doctors tried in vain to relieve me, but to no purpose.

"Morphine and other opiates!

"Had no effect!

"After two months I was given up to die! ! !

"When my wife heard a neighbor tell what Hop Bitters had done for her, she at once got and gave me some. The first dose eased my brain and seemed to go hunting through my system for the pain.

"The second dose eased me so much that I slept two hours, something I had not done for two months. Before I had used five bottles I was well and at work as hard as any man could, for over three weeks; but I worked too hard for my strength, and taking a hard cold, I was taken with the most acute and painful rheumatism all through my system that ever was known.

"I called the doctors again, and after several weeks they left me a cripple on crutches for life, as they said. I met a friend and told him my case, and he said Hop Bitters had cured him and would cure me. I pooched at him, but he was so earnest I was induced to use them again.

"In less than four weeks I threw away my crutches and went to work lightly and kept on using the Bitters for five weeks, until I became as well as any man living, and have been so for six years since.

It has also cured my wife, who had been sick for years; and has kept her and my children well and healthy with from two to three bottles per year. There is no need to be sick at all if these Bitters are used. J. J. BERR,

—The Geo. E. Starr's freight list amounted to only 2 horses for Mr. O. W. Halcomb. This was due to the fact that freight and passengers were transfered from the Haywood, which she met below Port Ludlow, and which is being used in this way in consequence of the detention to the North Pacific.

—A party composed of Messrs. Wolf, Liddell, McDonald, Gravelly, Doig, Wilson, Redmond, and Clark, left this afternoon in a sail boat, for the east coast, where they will celebrate the Queen's birthday—fishing and shooting and by occasional philosophical discussions to relieve the monotony. They return again on Monday evening. The party is in charge of Mr. Gravelly, who has been appointed Commodore. His nautical experience guarantees the safety of the crew and promises a pleasant time for the whole party.

THE STONE-CUTTERS' STRIKE.

As Told by the Men—Why they Struck Work.

Mr. Charles Farrell, who acted as spokesman for the stone-cutters recently employed by Larkin, Connolly & Co., cutting stone on Salt Spring Island for the Esquimalt dry-dock, gave the following explanation of the causes that led to the present strike. In January work began on the island with a force of about twenty-five men, and the number has been increased until it finally reached between fifty and sixty. The firm advertised in the Victoria papers that $3.50 per day would be paid stone-cutters, and this they claim was the means of bringing a number of good workmen from California and other points on the coast. When about thirty-five had been put to work by the day, at from $2.50 to $3.50, those coming afterward with the expectation of getting $3.50 per day were given piece work at a price at which the men were unable to make more than $2.25 per day. A bill of prices was then drawn up, together with a petition signed by all of the thirty piece workers, which was submitted to Mr. Gallagher, the superintendent, for acceptance. After considering the matter, Mr. Gallagher offered to split the difference between the price then being paid and the price demanded, but on consultation with his foreman, Mr. D. Simms, he withdrew from the offer. All of the piece workers with the exception of Mr. Jerry Maroney, adhered to the agreement at which they had arrived and immediately struck work. Time checks for the amounts due each man were given, payable at Esquimalt, but on being presented yesterday payment was refused before the 15th of June, which is the regular monthly pay day of the company. Fifteen Chinamen are now at the quarry, and it is believed by the strikers that the work will in future be carried on by that class. This is the story as told by the men, who are anxious that it should appear in print. As a matter of course, there are two sides to every story, and the company will probably have another version to give of the misunderstanding. The firm of Larkin, Connolly & Co., has hitherto shown a disposition to employ only white labor, believing it to be the best and most economical for the difficult and important work they have in hand. Good and sufficient reasons other than imaginary retrenchment, have influenced them in the course that has been taken.

Furious Runaway.

A team of horses, owned and driven by a Chinaman, started from the foot of Johnson street last evening and ran at a furious rate up that thoroughfare. John, while trying to get the horses under control, slipped down on the pole of the wagon, making his position a most perilous one. The animals had evidently determined that the "Chinese must go," and they did go. At the corner of Blanchard and Johnson streets the horses ran into the ditch, and bringing up suddenly against the sidewalk, wagon, horses and and Chinaman were upset in a heap. On being rescued from his uncomfortable position the Celestial was found to have an ugly scalp wound, but beyond that no damage was done.

PORT MOODY ITEMS.

—A large number of men from up country landed at Port Moody Tuesday—most of whom, we believe, secured immediate employment.

Mr. Augustus Harder, parser of the steamer Idaho, was the happiest man in this city yesterday. On Wednesday he was married at Seattle, the bride being Miss Mary L. Wilkinson, of Victoria.

Last Saturday the people of Surrey voted on a by-law allowing members of the council to receive pay for their services. There were only 16 votes polled. These were equally divided. The returning officer declared it carried.

The Colonist is easily gulled, so thinks the Columbian. It says: Some wag informed the Colonist that Riel had a brother living at Ladner's Landing, and the Colonist took the bait.

—Negotiating for the clearing of several lots in different parts of the townsite have been closed this week, yet little was done in the way of burning, on account of the frequent rains.

—A boarder at the Caledonia hotel on Tuesday night very nearly caused the building being destroyed by fire.

—The Gazette says: Mr. Laurens, a Winnipeg gentleman who had invested largely in real estate here, has begun to make his presence felt in a manner that speaks volumes for his energy and foresight. He is now erecting one of a number of buildings he contemplates the construction of in a short time. There is room for more Winnipeggers of his stamp.

—Monday's train did not arrive until Tuesday 2 o'clock a. m., bringing mails and passengers and cattle. The delay was caused principally by the engine jumping off the track above Port Hammond. More heavy slides are seriously apprehended on account of heavy rains. So says the Gazette.

—The steamer Amelia brought the following passengers: Mrs. Cornwall, Misses Cornwall, and Gorge Cornwall, Mrs Jones, Mrs Robinson, Mrs Staff, Miss Smith, Mrs Haslick, Mrs Smith, Miss Gordon, Mrs Sabeston, Mrs Taylor, Miss North, Sabeston, Halpenny, S D Pope, McCullough, Hughes, Moffatt, Morrison, Stevens, Johnston, Barricks, Ross, Woodman, Hagenbach, Wilbaut, Blackburn, Howe, McInnes, Lane, McPhaddeo, Wood, Watch, Matthews, Clarke, Russell, and Sinclair.

The Post Office

Will be open for general delivery on Monday morning from 8 to 9 o'clock. Box delivery from 7 a. m. to 8 p. m.

SEDUCTION CASE.

LAKIN vs. IRVING.

The Jury Find a Verdict in Favor of Defendant.

The jury in this case returned to the court room at 6:15 o'clock with the verdict, "We find there is no direct evidence to support the plaintiff's claim against the defendant."

Mr. Davie said that was not a verdict for defendant, and said that if his Lordship would rule that it was not a verdict for defendant he would accept it as a non-suit.

His Lordship thought that in point of law the verdict was in favor of the defendant.

The foreman stated that it was the intention of the jury to render a verdict for defendant owing to failure of evidence by the plaintiff.

Mr. Davie wished the judge to ask the jury whether the introduction of the witness Bott to the plaintiff's daughter took place on the 14th of April or 21st of May.

His Lordship declined to put the question.

A verdict for the defendant was entered.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

Onderdonkism.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

SIR:—Your recent strictures upon Mr. Onderdonk's excessive freight charges have been fairly advanced by you as an exponent of public opinion; but it should not be forgotten that there are two sides to every question. If it is borne in mind that he has had to buy off other contractors at Ottawa; to "see" various senators and members (and your average Canuck legislator knows his value as well as any Congressman), to employ incompetent political hangers-on, both provincial and eastern; to pay commissions at every turn; to keep open house for the official pashas; to retain lawyers on the mainland, and in Victoria; the conclusion can scarcely be avoided that Mr. Onderdonk's bread is not buttered on both sides. Some one, it is clear, must "pay the piper," and why should it be Andrew Onderdonk, rather than the merchants and settlers? Can it be supposed that the contractor is spending two or three years in your "sea of mountains" for any reason other than personal gain? As an American I cannot but admire the tact and energy which has enabled a second-class Yankee contractor successfully to rule a British territory nearly three times as large as Great Britain and Ireland for upwards of four years. BOSTON BOY.

My Second Epistle According to St. David.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

In last Sunday's issue of this paper, St. David of the Colonist, regales his Sunday readers with an article headed "The Martyr of a Conspiracy," in which he attempts to hold me up to public ridicule. The saint has hardly, however, said enough when he has said that a Merry Andrew is an indispensable adjunct to the sittings of the Board of School Trustees. If such is the case, the villain and his co-adjutor are equally indispensable for the completion of that as of any other play. St. David, from necessity, acts for the present only as the co-adjutor, and to him is delegated the role of misrepresenting and falsifying whatever is done to thwart or oppose the villain and the scamps of the board. His attempt to be facetious, at my expense, would be extremely ludicrous, were it not for the moral depravity shown in the distortion of facts, by statements that may be valued as having one ounce of truth to one pound of lie. But as the public know the saint's notorious failing in this particular already only too well, I shall refrain from further answering the scurrility and abuse contained in the article referred to, in order that the villain of the piece may receive his due share of my attention. It has been my experience while on the Board of School Trustees, to sit for three years with a trustee who having once been detected altering a teachers' certificate was, of course, fully qualified, according to Saint David's idea of the proper fitness of things, to preside over the public schools of this city, and in whose welfare, while on the board the saint took such peculiar interest at the election of 1881, as to take the extraordinary course of bringing 150 Chinese to vote for a candidate who avowed his intention of supporting him. That individual has now vanished from the board and I feel proud to think that I bore a hand, and took an active part, in his compulsory retirement. My experience goes further still: For the last year I have sat with another similar trustee, and one who, in my opinion, is, or rather should be, disqualified from having a seat on the board. But so long as such a man is backed up by the government and given every facility for registering supporters, to the prejudice of better men, and so long as he is advertised by the unscrupulous portion of the press as a fit and proper person for the post, so long will such characters continue to thrust themselves into places whence those who are at the best but unconvicted of illegal regularities and unconvicted only because not proceeded against, should be rigorously excluded. The person referred to made himself famous not many years ago through an attempt to obtain a teacher's certificate by questionable means. Though the fact was publicly stated at the time, both in and out of the House of Assembly, though the Supreme Court refused to interfere with the action in the matter of the board of examiners, though the Provincial Secretary has, for purposes of his own, called that action an act of vindictiveness; although more than one department of the government is compromised by the attempted fraud, the broad fact remains that this matter is still uninvestigated, and that the alleged manipulation of teachers' certificates has had the powers of the magistracy conferred upon him, in order to facilitate his re-election next June to the Board of Trustees for this city. There is an old proverb which runs as follows: "Birds of a feather flock together." Now as St. David's paper and vote and influence were always—and I am afraid always will be—thrown into the scale in favor of such characters as I have mentioned, he can hardly complain if I class him with those whom he supports, without ever recalling the public attention to his connection with such colossal swindles as the words "Patent Stone" and "Cariboo Quartz" evoke in our recollections. Midst all the distresses of a plundered province it is gratifying to know that the sheet known as the Colonist newspaper, has now achieved its climax of success, as well as mischief, and that all that remains for it now is to continue its retrograde course to the obscurity of a paper damned in public opinion as the organ of syndicate monopolists and dealers in logus articles. With it will vanish from the scene that will know them no more forever, St. David, Honest John, Slippery Charlie and that humbug of much law, poor English and doubtful celebrity, Quibble, of the firm of Quibble & Gammon.

Population of Portland.

The census of 1885 shows up 21,633 persons in the city proper, exclusive of an estimate of 4000 Chinese. East Portland has 4631 and Albina 1025. Including the Chinese, who are probably overestimated, the three municipalities have an aggregate population of 31,289, or a little more than half the enthusiastic estimates.
